

Paul Sturgess, an ex-basketball player for the LA Lakers, came to speak to the children about his love of the sport but also about growing up being a really tall child and an exceptionally tall adult. He reminded everyone that we are all different and have different strengths and talents which we bring to any team. The children thoroughly enjoyed hearing his talk and had lots of questions about his sporting career and opportunities and challenges that he his height has brought him. What an interesting and lovely visitor!
