

Reception Class Big Garden Birdwatch

This project will ...

- 1. Empower pupils to take meaningful action within their school and local community.
- 2. Celebrate progress through our class dojo, with families, school website and social media where we hope to inspire others to take part and feed the birds.

Description of project

Reception class took part in the RSPB Big Garden Birdwatch.

Key Details About The Big Garden Birdwatch:

- Goal: To track the health of UK bird populations, helping the RSPB identify which species are thriving or in decline.
- How to Participate: Count the highest number of each bird species you see in your chosen spot at one time during a one-hour period.
- Submission: Results are submitted online or by post to the RSPB.
- Significance: It is a major citizen science project that has been running annually since 1979.

The data gathered helps inform conservation efforts to protect declining species.

Pupil outcomes & impact

1. Enjoyment
2. Empowerment - They wanted to help the birds in our local area, encourage more birds onto our school grounds and inspire others to look after our local birds.
3. Celebrate the increase in birds within our school environment.
4. Taking part in this enormous project offered the children a greater sense of achievement and belonging to something bigger.
